Area Overview

When driving through the streets of downtown Dayton, don't worry about hitting a curb. The city has super wide streets that, at one time, allowed wagons drawn by four pairs of oxen to pull a U-turn. Today you won't run into any oxen strolling through the streets, but Dayton is still full of its own unique highlights. The Dayton Art Institute is modeled after the famous museum in Rome, the Italian Renaissance Villa d'Este, and features an amazing collection of fine art. On top of that, while you're in Dayton you're in the home of the Wright Brothers and subsequently also in the home of the first ever airplane. Airplane's have since "taken off" more than any other invention since the printing press. Yeah! Needless to say, all those wide streets and world-class inventions have left Drury with no choice but set up a home base in Dayton.
