Area Overview

In honor of Pluto losing its status as a planet, we chose to put our latest hotel in the very place it was discovered over 70 years ago. But Flagstaff's space history doesn't end there. Over 50,000 years ago, a giant meteor, weighing several hundred thousand tons (think multiple elephants) rammed into the area that is now Flagstaff. The crater left behind was used by Apollo astronauts to practice moonwalking. Thankfully, Drury decided against building our hotel inside the crater and instead built this beautiful six-story building nearby in the heart of Flagstaff.

In addition to great views of space, Flagstaff offers breathtaking views of nature. Almost anywhere you look—whether you're taking in the majestic red rocks of Sedona or the Grand Canyon—you'll find some fascinating piece of natural real estate.
